

Islamic Shari'ah Perspective on Chicken Feather Panels as an Alternative Wall Material

Ansarullah Fharuddin^{1,a,*}, Mukhtar Thahir Syarkawi^{2,a}, Yusri Muhammad Arsyad^{3,a}, Muhammad Zainal Altim^{4,e}, Ahmad Nadhil Edar^{5,e}

^a Department of Architecture, Engineering Faculty, Universitas Muslim Indonesia

^a Department of Civil, Engineering Faculty, Universitas Muslim Indonesia

^a Department of Islamic Religion, Islamic Religion Faculty, Universitas Muslim Indonesia

^a Department of Electrical, Engineering Faculty, Universitas Muslim Indonesia

^a Department of Architecture, Engineering Faculty, Universitas Muslim Indonesia

* ansarullah.ansarullah@umi.ac.id

Abstract. Chicken feather could be a squander that's created each day and is still underutilized. A few thinks about have been conducted to demonstrate that chicken plumes can be utilized as an elective fabric within the field of engineering, especially the field of architecture. This consider points to look at how the Islamic Shari'ah perspective is related to chicken feather squander, which is waste from poultry slaughter which will be recognized as unclean or something forbidden, because within the handle there's blood and it is conceivable to gotten to be carrion in case the butcher prepare is not in agreement with Islamic Shari'ah. This research uses the think about strategy of the Qur'an and the Prophet's hadith in emphasizing the halal and haram laws of chicken feathers to be utilized as elective divider boards within the viewpoint of Islamic law. The results of this investigate uncovered the clarification within the shape of rules or laws and directions in Islamic law related to the halal and haram law of chicken feathers as an elective fabric within the field of engineering.

Keywords: Chicken Feather, Alternative Material, Halal Haram, Islamic Shari'ah.