

War and Suffering in Palestine: Humanitarian Perspectives, Challenges, and Solutions for Building Sustainable Justice and Peace

Ulfa Kurnia¹, Nurul Wasilah Fitrah^{1,*}, dan Siti Nurhalisa¹

¹*Department of Arabic Literature, Faculty of Letters, Universitas Muslim Indonesia, Makassar, 90231, Indonesia*

Presenter's email: fitrahshila19@gmail.com*

Abstract. The conflict in Palestine has persisted for decades, causing profound suffering for its people and significant global repercussions. This article explores the war and suffering in Palestine from a humanitarian perspective, identifying the main challenges that hinder efforts to achieve sustainable justice and peace. Through the analysis of various sources and recent literature, this article highlights the humanitarian aspects often overlooked in political and military discussions. Additionally, the article offers practical solutions that can be implemented by the international community, governments, and non-governmental organizations to address these challenges. Special emphasis is placed on the importance of dialogue between parties, the empowerment of local communities, and the active role of global actors in supporting peace initiatives. With a holistic approach and a focus on social justice, this article aims to make a meaningful contribution to the efforts to achieve sustainable peace in Palestine.

Keywords: Humanitarian, Palestine, Suffering, War

